The Color Genesis: Inspired to Grace Adult coloring book is OK. We got this because I have really gotten in to adult coloring books lately. I have tried many different books of different types. As a Christian family we thought this would be a nice book to color and share the pictures, possibly even frame them. This is what I like about the book: 1. It is pretty designs. 2. Each page is black backed. 3. Each page is single sheet. 4. The paper is thick and good quality. 5. It is biblically based. What I do not like: 1. The designs are too simple. There is hardly anything to color. 2. The images are not challenging to color. I feel like I might as well just color a kids coloring book. 3. Every design is repeated in reverse, white backing or opposite as black backing. (I would rather have had 60 unique pictures.) 4. I wish it had been a King James version of Quotations. It is New International Version. NIV. The way I give out my star ratings is: 1 STAR - I hate it. I would not recommend it, and will most likely return it. 2 STARS - It has some serious issues but I don't really like it or its quality. I may or may not return it but I will not recommend it. 3 STARS - It is OK. Some good, some bad or just regular and nothing special about it. I probably will keep it and might or might not recommend it, depending on the person's needs. 4 STARS - I like it. I think it has some really good qualities, it may or may not have a minor tweak that I would think would make it better but over all I do like it, and I would recommend it to friends and family members. 5 STARS - I LOVE it. I do not give 5 stars unless I really think it is an exceptional product.

I have recently started coloring for stress relief. It is nice and relaxing to sit in the evening with the family and I find that I can enjoy it more if I am coloring. For some reason I feel like if I am sitting, I need to be doing something. I ordered the Color Genesis Christian Coloring Book for this purpose. I figure that I can at least be inspired and reflect on the scripture while I am coloring. It at least makes me feel better about sitting and not accomplishing more than a colored page. The Color Genesis coloring book is what the author calls Day/Night. This means that each scripture picture has two copies. One is white with black drawing (DAY) and the other is black with white drawing (NIGHT). The NIGHT version reminds me a lot of the black velvet fuzzy posters you can buy for children. It just is not fuzzy. None of the pictures are especially complicated to color. I really like this. Who wants to be stressed out trying to color when you are doing it to relax? I have found that the DAY pictures work well with colored pencils and the NIGHT pictures really stand out with markers. Each of the pages are one-sided with a black design on the back. If you wanted to tear them out, you do not waste a picture on the back. This is definitely a plus. Also, if you use markers, you don't risk the markers bleeding through and messing up the picture on the back. I tried using markers on the NIGHT picture and could not see where any of the markers bled through. There are no marks on the black back or on the next picture. Also, the black on the NIGHT picture did not smear into my markers. Each of the pages are thicker than regular paper but not as thick as cardstock. They are thick, but still flexible.
