Customer Reviews

I've had a lot of fun trying the recipes and savoring the tips in this book. The two biggest benefits that I gained from this cookbook were unique salad dressing recipes and some really amazing ideas for tempeh. There's enough mix 'n match going on to offer nearly endless possibilities. I love it!! I love salads and eat them daily, usually twice a day. The recipes in this cookbook offer a wide range of bold flavor and texture variations. Many of the dressing recipes make about 1 1/2 cups, and they must be used within 2 days. I only cook for myself, so I have to cut the recipes down. I've enjoyed all of the recipes that I've tried so far, although I had a snafu with a chickpea recipe. Many of the recipes have long ingredient lists, but so far they have all been prepared quickly and easily. Upstate Dressing, a creamy tahini and sundried tomato recipe, couldn't be easier or faster to prepare. I cut the recipe in half and followed it exactly. It was easy to blend with my stick blender, and came out the perfect consistency. The garlic was strong for my taste, so I'll use less next time. Otherwise, it was very delicious! I had a large salad, so I measured 3 tablespoons and it covered it nicely. There were 6 tablespoons left, so that will cover another 2 salads. I tried the Smokehouse Chickpeas and Greens salad on page 111 and it was delicious, although I did make an error due to the layout of the recipe. The recipe ingredients are divided into Chickpeas, Salad, and Dressing. Nutritional yeast was listed under Chickpeas, although it was supposed to be sprinkled over the completed salad before serving. Yep, I added the yeast to sauce mixture which I added to the chickpeas in the skillet. Pay closer attention than I did when you make it. Better me than you, right?
